OER18: Open to All

18–19 April 2018 Watershed, Bristol, UK

OER18 turns the focus on one of the often-cited benefits of ‘open’ – the promise of inclusivity. How do the resources, methods and projects that make up open education support making education available to all? As a movement over 15 years old, has open education made an impact – on learners, on society and on education? What can we do to support learning in the open – and how can we use open to support learning? The conference chairs are academic and open education researcher Vivien Rolfe, and Wonke.com Associate Editor David Kernohan.

Conference themes:

- » How can open practice and research support learner success?
- » How does Open Education foster learner diversity and support inclusivity?
- » Politics in action
- » What skills do learners need and develop in experiencing open learning?
- » How is OER learning from, and contributing to, other open activities?
- » Wildcard
